10 Galleries to Visit Now Around SoHo and TriBeCa

LUBOV through May 6; 373 Broadway, No. 207, lubov.nyc.

A resonant quintet of color photographs by the young artist Jenna Westra currently occupies this postage stamp of a gallery. Three bright young things sit half-dressed on a floor of lucent green; a model in a Mao-collar blouse winces as another squeezes the juice of a lemon into her open mouth; and, in a related video, performers in various states of dress pose, pout, and press their feet to the leaves of a pineapple. If these images draw on the off-kilter glamour of Torbjørn Rødland and Wolfgang Tillmans, Ms. Westra also takes a feminist scalpel to earlier art and literature that equated young women with budding flowers and ripe fruit.
